COURSES IN TOPIC STUDIES OFFERED IN SEMESTER 2, 2024-2025

HIST 4215

Topic Studies in Western History: Modern British History (E)

This course examines key events and themes in British history from the Victorian period until the post-Second World War era. Students will explore the broad political and economic shifts of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, with an emphasis on the social and cultural transformations that resulted from or prompted these changes. Course topics will include: popular social and political movements; the rise of the British Empire and its effects in Britain; industrialisation and urbanization; the emergence of public health; gender, family, and religion; the First and Second World Wars; decolonisation and post-war migration; the welfare state; the 1960s and 'Swinging London.' Overall, the course will consider the role of imperialism, war, political change and social welfare legislation, and the growth of mass culture in shaping modern Britain.

Dr. Catherine Ladds

Topic Studies in Global History: History of Cities in the Modern Era (E)

The 19th-century reformulation of cities around the world serves as the foundation for many of our own contemporary urban experiences. In this course, we will explore the dynamics of urbanism in the modern era through a global, comparative perspective that approaches cities as increasingly connected and networked places. Our examination of the large-scale physical transformation of cities will cover topics such as the shifting discourses on urban design, infrastructure, food provisioning, urban health, and nightlife. From the context of colonial ambitions, we will explore the political development of urban institutions like museums, zoos, and botanical gardens. This course will also examine the roles of race, gender, and class in the varied experiences of urban life.
